We had the privilege and honor of caring for Chuck for many years and he always had a big smile on his face and a bigger heart whenever he came in to see us. “ I have to tell you a funny story about your dad that I will never forget. There are many. I seen him in Wal-Mart one day back when Viv was in the hospital a while back. We were standing there talking. When I first noticed him he had several 12 packs of drinks in his buggy. We stood there a while talking. Me knowing so many people they would stop and say hello and I would turn and say hello. We quit talking and went on our way. I got to the check out I didn't pay attention just checked my stuff out the lady scanned all the stuff in and under my buggy and I paid and went on my way. I get out to the truck and notice chuck sitting next to me(he wasn't in that park when I parked there and he was several parks down) but was next to me then. He got out and said he would help me load my groceries. I said ok but you don't have to. Well. He started loading those drinks on the tailgate and I was like OML I don't remember putting them on there. Me thinking I had done grabbed the wrong cart on way out as I had stopped and talked to someone else. Me all in a panic. Chuck went to laughing with that big ol grin. He had put those drinks under my buggy when we were standing there talking and every time I had turn to someone that said hello he was slipping them on my buggy one at a time. I said I thought you were waiting to help me with my groceries and you were just waiting on your drinks. We laughed so hard. He offered to pay for them. He just didn't want to stand in the long check out line because he was so tired. I told him no he didn't have to pay me to just go home and get some rest so he could go back to see Viv. We laughed about that almost every time I seen him after that. RIP Chuck. You will be missed.

“ The ULTIMATE red-neck (aka) Chuck has been my parents neighbor for at least 25-ish years. There was always something being blown up or shot at in our neck of the woods!! I will always remember him being a big prankster and never did I see him without a big grin on his face. He loved Wal-Mart, Starbucks and my Dads cooking!! His heart was as BIG as his smile...He will truly be missed by all who knew him. Rest in Peace Chuck.

“ A great man who laughed and smiled all the time. Never did I ever hear a bad thing about him. He was like a little brother to me because he lived with my parents and me for awhile when he was about two years old. I was a senior in high school. But he would wake up through all hours of the night and want to be rocked. So I did it! Except when I was about to fall out for lack of sleep he would say "rock me" and if would not start rocking he would just get louder and louder saying "rock me! ROCK ME!" And I did!! Such a sweetheart!! Will miss him so much!! Love you Chuck!!
