“ I have so many memories of Uncle Danny like many of you who may read this, so I'll just tell one. Uncle Danny had just gotten a new/used corvette and he wanted to show me how powerful it was. I got in the seat and strapped in. I had never been in a corvette and had no idea of the horse power those things had. He looked at me with this grin I'll never forget, like a kid in a candy store, said “hold on” and punched it. The G force of the acceleration pushed me back in the seat and the front wheels came off the asphalt. I looked over at uncle Danny and he had everything under control as he shifted and held on to the powerful machine. He slowed it down and was laughing that Mayhan laugh smiling ear to ear. Though I was surprised at the speed and power, I never felt unsafe, I knew he had it, he always had things under control. He was a great man and will be sorely missed.
