“ Mr. Carlisle was a sweet man. The short few years that I have know Jerry have been a blessing. He knew Our Lord and Savior. And today is talking to Jesus healthy and pain free. I got a laugh about how much he enjoyed watching Family Feud every evening. His presence her will be missed. I look forward to seeing him again.

“ Jerry's grandfather, Seaborn, and my grandfather, Marvin, were brothers. I remember Seaborn telling me about "Tadpole" his nickname for Jerry. I also remember when I transferred from another school in first grade, my teacher asked me what my dad did and I replied, he goes to school (college). She asked what he was studying and Jerry told her he studied books. He watched over me while he attended rest of first grade, telling me to stop chewing my dress hem because the kids could see my panties. I look back fondly on those early years with Jerry and his family who lived close by when we were growing up.
